

Kid Food Grown Up

These childhood staples have blossomed into gastronomic greatness

THERE'S NO REASON to be ashamed of your cravings for cheesy mac or your penchant for Pop-Tarts. In fact, playful chefs around the world are encouraging patrons to eat like a kid by putting a sophisticated spin on childhood staples. Here are four of our favorites:

LOBSTER POP-TARTS

Barton G. The Restaurant, Los Angeles

These flaky pastries are filled with a creative combination of Maine lobster, Gruyère and a Pernod Mornay sauce. Instead of a frosting finish, tarts are served with Tabasco hollandaise and tarragon aioli.

FRIED HOUSEMADE BOLOGNA SANDWICH

Remedy, Dallas

This lunchbox favorite gets a gourmet upgrade with shavings of house-made bologna, melted American cheese and sweet onions piled between two slices of buttery, griddled challah.

STUFFED MACARONI

Epicure, Paris

Four-Michelin-starred chef Éric Fréchon serves a grown-up version of mac 'n' cheese: handmade pasta stuffed with black truffle, artichoke and duck foie gras, gratinated with matured Parmesan cheese.

BURGER DI TARTARE DI MANZO

T Bar; Lake Como, Italy

This sultry burger will be your new happy meal. Made with a melt-in-your-mouth patty of beef tartare, the burger is blanketed with delicate shavings of black truffles and tartar sauce served on a freshly baked bun.
